To Bridge Shawsheen Problem

A determination on the future status of the Bailey Bridge over the Shawsheen River is due to be made by the selectmen following a hearing in the near future.

This was determined Monday night by the board after hearing appeals from York street residents for relief from traffic conditions on their street, which is now the main driveway for tenants of the Shetlands Mills properties, formerly Raytheon or Shawsheen Mills.

The bridge has been closed for over a year. The span was closed after Raytheon moved to its new quarters in West Andover and residents of Kenilworth street and Riverina Road appealed for its closing.

Monday night, the York street residents, who were not heard from when the closing was mandated, informed the board of the traffic conditions now prevalent with the increased occupancy of the Shetland properties.

Sometimes there are three lines of traffic plugging the street at peak hours, the board was informed.

Chairman Roger W. Collins reported on the legality concerning the bridge, and it was determined from an opinion from Town Counsel Alfred L. Daniels that the bridge may be opened, if Shetland is desirous of such.

Town counsel informed the selectmen that the town meeting

Will Build Case For Access Road To Lowell Junction

The town of Andover will make a concentrated effort to obtain an access road of some type off Route 93 into the Lowell Junction industrial area.

Construction of improved roads for access to the area by the town is generally considered too expensive and even with additional industrial development in the area, would make such a project economically not feasible.

This was the consensus of a joint meeting of the selectmen, planning board and industrial commission Monday night.

The meeting was prompted by a subdivision plan submitted to the planning board which would result in construction of houses in the path of three recommended approach roads to Lowell Junction off Dascomb road.

Mrs. Margaret Keck, chairman of the planning board, stated it was that group's feelings that some decisions were imperative in view of engineering studies and recommendations made to the town regarding the industrial area access.

The subdivision plan must be approved by the planners, provided it meets all town regulations, which it apparently does.

An alternative would be to take some of the land by eminent domain, which the boards do not feel they wish to do.

As for the interchange off 93, Mrs. Keck pointed out that such is desirable, but state department of public works authorities look askance at such a proposal due to the proximity of other interchanges off 93, the section is a golf area and an access route would not lead to substantial through roads.

An alternate suggested in the Voorhees engineering report done for town consideration, requires the co-operation of the town of Tewksbury for development of a road into the area.

The other two suggested paths

Facilities Stickers Available

Despite votes to the contrary, Andover still has a dump and it remains a popular place. It also requires a sticker for entrance to the Chandler Road landfill site.

"Andover Facilities" stickers arrived at the police station this week and are being distributed to residents who present their automobile registration and 25 cents.

If and when the dump is closed, the stickers will still be valid and required for entrance to Poms Pond during the summer.

Founder's Day Set For May 2

Founder's Day, an annual observance honoring men and women for the service to the town, will be observed on Wednesday, May 2 at 7:30 p.m. at the High School library.

The observance marks the 327th anniversary of the founding of Andover which actually took place on May 6, 1646.

At the reception, employees will be recognized for the years of service to the town, and certificates of appreciation presented.

Pins will be presented to municipal employees, a ruby pin for ten years service, emerald for 15 years, sapphire for 20, diamond for 25 and double diamond for 50 years.

Remarks will be given by town Manager J. Maynard Austin, Chairman Roger W. Collins of the board of selectmen and Supt. of Schools Dr. Kenneth Seifert.

There will be entertainment and refreshments will be served at the affair, open to the public.

Wedding Assistance Offered

Spring is a characteristic time for weddings or for bridal planning.

Contained in the pages of this week's TOWNSMAN, are offerings of merchants and service agencies to assist in the planning of the big day.

Everything from bridal fashions, gifts to planning the wedding trip is contained in announcements aimed at assisting the planning of the great occasion.

DiDio Is Elected Chairman

Anthony DiDio, a Raytheon administrator, was elected chairman of the Andover Industrial Development Commission at an organizational meeting Monday night.

DiDio, who was reappointed by the selectmen Monday night, will succeed Wolf Berthold who has been serving as chairman for the past several years and will now serve as secretary.

Mrs. Dorothy Sherrerd, was elected vice chairman of the commission.

Also reappointed to another term on the board, by the selectmen Monday was S. Joseph Hoffman.

Cost Effectiveness Implemented But Is It Really Acceptable

Is the town of Andover really interested in bringing cost effectiveness and competitive bidding to the school system?" wonders Business Manager Ed Weil.

In an interview six months after he replaced Jack Berberian, with a mandate to bring cost effectiveness to the school system, Superintendent Kenneth Seifert's new business manager told the TOWNSMAN that he saw a paradox in this situation: the administration has introduced competitive bidding and other cost effective measures to the system, but the only town reaction he's gotten so far has been the public outcry of the special interests who have lost out in bidding and are crying "Foul!"

A saving of $6,000 from the low bid of an out-of-town transportation firm to transport Lesley College student teachers netted Weil threats of a law suit.

A saving of $4,000 a year by putting special education transportation out to bid won public statements from some losing bidders that the low bid would mean unqualified drivers.

When Weil advertised outside the system for a maintenance man, to get someone qualified to handle permissible minor heating, plumbing and electrical repairs to save school dollars, he received complaints from local unions, a local inspector and local firms who used to get the business.

Last month the school committee was considering Weil's reorganization recommendation - - to abolish the administrative position of head custodian, making senior custodians directly responsible to building principals. Weil said the administration and school committee got lots of pressure and public comment from friends of the head custodian to retain the position, which was understandable. What wasn't so understandable was that there were no calls or comment from the public supporting this efficiency and economy move. Weil finds this surprising in view of recent elections which were supposed to reflect a broad town interest in school department austerity. On the head custodian issue, the school committee finally approved an administrative recommendation to abolish the position, but retain the man as a senior custodian, without a drop in salary.

"I have assumed that the town wants the most cost-effective quality-assured business operation here," Weil told the TOWNSMAN. "But I sure have to depend on a silent majority to make that assumption. Most of the vocal comments at school committee and the letters to the editor seem to come from the special interest groups whose personal motivations are often not in the best interests of the school system and the Andover taxpayer. It's very easy in the face of this gap to wonder if the town really wants cost-effectiveness in the areas of reorganization, efficiency and competitive bidding. The system has been remiss, by the way, in not getting competitive bidding on special education transportation for the last several years. If we hadn't remedied it this year, we might have lost our state reimbursement."

"Of course, when you first begin to go out to competitive bidding, the people who have previously had the contracts and some local firms stand to lose some dollars; it's understandable that they should be upset. But when their statements start to generate a lot of misconceptions in town about the

Miss Ramsey Program Supervisor

The Recreation Department has filled the program supervisor position, approved by March town meeting, by appointment of Miss Gail Ramsey, a physical education instructor at masconomet Regional High school.

Gail C. Ramsey

Miss Ramsey is a graduate of Northeastern University with a degree in both recreation and physical education. She has already begun working part time for the Recreation Department, and will assume her full time duties beginning June 19.

The new program supervisor will be in charge of a reconstructed playground program this summer, says Gary Ralph, Andover's recreation director. In September, she will assume charge of the full program of adult evening courses. Ralph said Miss Ramsey will also supplement these with special activities of both phys ed and cultural nature—could be basketball game here, a concert there, he indicated.

Next year, Miss Ramsey will set up the summer playground program as well as personally supervising it, according to the director. This year Ralph is doing the setting up, with the new program supervisor learning the ropes by following its development as a part time associate.

Ask Essex Broadway!

Let's face it: Bob and Annie were just plain sick of their wedding furniture. Mostly hand-me-downs, but you'd never call them heirlooms. So they shopped around, for this and that and these and those, and when they had the grand total went to Essex Broadway for a Personal Loan. At low, savings bank rates. And before the first scratch shows up on the new coffee table they'll have it paid off. Essex Broadway makes Personal Loans for any good reason you can think of. And maybe some you can't!

New Hours For Visits At Hospital

Effective May 1, a new schedule of visiting hours will be instituted at Bon Secours hospital.

The new schedule provides visitations from noon to 8 p.m. in private patients rooms and 2 to 4 p.m. and 6:30 to 8 p.m., in multiple occupancy rooms. Visits to the pediatric patients will be 11 a.m. to 8 p.m. and on the maternity floor, 2 to 4 and 7 to 8 p.m.

Visitors to cardiac care and intensive care units, which are limited to members of the immediate family, the hours will be from 2 to 2:20 and 7 to 7:20 p.m.

Visits to St. Dymphna's wing will be from 2 to 4 and 6:30 to 8 p.m.

The hospital stated that it had adopted the new visiting hour schedule in an attempt to better serve the needs of its patients and their families. Visitors are an essential ingredient in the total recovery of a patient, helping him to have a positive mental outlook, making him feel wanted and serving as a link between the patient and the outside world.

Also, the hospital realizes that an illness in the family creates a temporary break in the family units, and a visit helps to restore a sense of unity.

qualifications of the low bidders, I feel we have to answer them. In these situations, we are out for the lowest bid that will assure the school system quality performance. A low bidder can be as qualified to perform as a higher bidder."

"I believe the townspeople really want a cost-effective school operation; the administration has been making proposals to accomplish this for the past six months, and will be coming up with more."

"But there is a credibility gap; this is because most of the public utterances on this have been coming from people with special interests. We get very little response on these issues from the taxpayer who foots the bill."

Lowell Junction

for the junction pass directly through the planned subdivision.

Atty. Thomas Tavenner suggested the concentrated effort toward getting the Route 93 interchange plan acceptable to state and federal authorities.

Mrs. Keck agreed that even if the town could get a commitment to such a possibility in the near future, then intermediate steps could be taken to relieve traffic conditions in the Ballardvale area which has resulted from the present and proposed industrial growth in the junction.

Mrs. Keck felt the situation was vital in view of the continued development and the continued use of River street, a narrow road, by the industrial concerns.

Selectman Alan F. French expressed what was a general feeling of his colleagues that the town would not spend the money to construct the access roads off Dascomb road or the plan to the Tewksbury line.

Chairman Roger W. Collins, suggested the creation of a subcommittee composed of representatives of the three boards to approach the state and federal authorities with the problem.

The chairman felt the approach should be "don't tell us no, tell us how," to get an interchange or access off Route 93 to the Lowell Junction area.

Selectman French also said that if the town was unified in its feeling of an access road to the Andover area, then it might impress the state and federal people.

French noted that while the access road to Lawrence has been agreeable to some, it is not a unanimous feeling of the townspeople as to its necessity.

The Lowell Junction access, French said, seems to be one of unanimous agreement as to its necessity and the state authorities who distribute the federal highway funds should be appraised of this fact.

Chairman Collins concluded the conference by advising the members of the other two boards they would receive direction from the board in the matter in the near future.

Bridge

vote which approved the placing of the bridge by the Army Corps of Engineers, was accomplished for Raytheon or its assignees. Shetland is considered the assignee, thus use of the bridge can be allowed.

Police Chief David L. Nicoll informed the gathering that he was an advocate of the bridge opening, "ever since you closed it," noting he can not control traffic flow with only a single access and egress route, which York street now represents.

Paul Roy, a York street resident said that in a conversation with a Shetland official, the firm was willing to open the gates to the bridge at 6:30 a.m. provided someone else would close them.

He indicated that Shetland would welcome the opening of the span which would lead to further utilization of far parking lots on the property.

Selectman Milton Greenberg felt the matter should be settled once and for all with public hearing, allowing the opponents of the bridge to also have their say.

Greenberg noted the matter had been debated for some time and should be settled.

A hearing will be scheduled for all concerned to express their views at one of the next two scheduled selectmen's meetings, Chairman Collins said.

George W. "Gus" Francis, 12 Alden Road, a senior engineer at Western Electric's Merrimack Valley Works, was instrumental in a cost reduction case involving a change in a manufacturing process which resulted in annual savings of nearly $100,000.

Cost Reduction Prime Concern

In an era of upward-spiraling labor and raw material costs, how does an industry hold the price line on its products?

One way that Western Electric Company, the manufacturing and supply arm of the Bell System, has traditionally found effective is to reduce the cost of manufacturing those products.

During 1972, the Merrimack Valley Works realized first time engineering cost reduction savings of $8.1 million, savings which contributed to Western's ability to hold the line on the prices of manufactured goods during 1972, despite significant inflationary pressures. These results inure to the benefit of the Bell telephone companies and the ultimate user of common carrier communications services, the general public.

In Western Electric, cost reduction is one of the most important tools it has to meet its commitment to the Bell Operating Companies.

At the Merrimack Valley Works, the emphasis on cost reduction has always been strong. In 1968, $4.4 million constituted an impressive savings figure. 1971's $7 million was a significant breakthrough. The 1972 figure of $8.1 million pleased even the people most involved in the cost reduction effort.

Senior Engineer Charles Higgins, Works cost reduction coordinator, attributes our overall cost reduction performance record to two factors - teamwork and enthusiasm.

He refers to the fact that, while the $8.1 million was the result of engineering cost reduction - entirely separate from the savings realized through the company's Employee Suggestion System or the reduction of clerical costs - it was reached only by close cooperation between Works engineering personnel and the supervisors and employees of the various manufacturing shops.

Another reason that Merrimack Valley Works people cite for taking pride in their 1972 cost reduction record, is that as long as the Works provides this kind of performance, it will continue to provide work for its employees and suppliers.

DESIGNS IN GLASS: Roland "Wes" St. Gelais, a local glass-blower, will be one of many artisans demonstrating their crafts at the Homelands Festival, May 3-5 at the YWCA, 38 Lawrence St., Lawrence.

Glass Blowing To Be Featured

During the Middle Ages Italian glass-blowers were kept prisoners on the island of Murano to preserve the secrets of Venetian glass-making. Today, however, a blow-and-tell attitude exists among the rapidly diminishing number of artisans in the trade.

"We're trying to revive an interest in the art to keep it from phasing out completely," said Roland "Wes" St. Gelais, a local glass-blower who operates the Unique Shop in Methuen.

St. Gelais, a former steeple-jack and bulldozer driver, travels to fairs and shows throughout the country to demonstrate his glass-blowing and glass-spinning techniques. His next appearance will be at the Homelands Festival, May 3-5 at the YWCA, 38 Lawrence St., Lawrence.

Considered a natural in his field, St. Gelais learned glass-blowing in a few weeks, in sharp contrast to the normal seven-year apprenticeship program. He turned to the craft in 1968 after a trip to Miami where he had watched a glass-blower at work. Intrigued by the process, he began experimenting with window glass and welding torches, quickly graduating to professional equipment and a full-time profession in the field.

His specialty now is spinning glass, which requires much more finesse than glass-blowing, according to St. Gelais.

"To blow glass we take a tube of pyrex glass and shape the object by twisting and blowing into the tube as it is held over a 4500-degree flame," he explained.

"To achieve the spun glass effect of a basket, for example, we slowly build the glass up one strand at a time and 'knit' the glass to form the basket-like open weave."

St. Gelais' spun glass objets d'art include everything from an elephant one-sixteenth of an inch which took about three minutes to make to a viking ship four feet long, involving a day and a half's work.

In manipulating the glass the artist's number one enemy and greatest friend is gravity - Newton's first law.

"If you heat a molten ball, attach it to a stem and quickly pull, the glass will sag with the gravity," St. Gelais pointed out. "But if you take that molten ball, attach it to the stem and slowly control the pull, the glass will slowly set or cool, allowing you to shape the line as you wish."

Although most glass-blowers work with a diagram as a guide, St. Gelais designs the object as he works with it, relying on his eyes to achieve the balance and symmetry he desires.

"Glass-working is a constant learning process," St. Gelais claims. "The art is 13,000 years old - dating back to ancient Egypt. Before the time of recorded history Egyptians used a glass glaze to coat pottery, tiles, figurines and clay beads. Today we're still developing more uses and ways of working with glass."

St. Gelais' new-old art of glass-blowing is one of many crafts to be demonstrated at the Homelands Festival. The public is invited to attend the three-day pageant.

To Direct Children's Play Here

Andover Community Theatre
(ACT) is presenting its first children's play, The Merry
Pranks of Tyll by Daniel Fleischhacker, at East Junior High on May 12, 10 a.m. and 2 p.m. Since children's comedy is a new dramatic field for the year-old theater group, the director had to be carefully selected.
There are many qualities one should look for in a director of children's theatre: academic training, teaching experience, and professional credits in children's drama, to name a few of the most important.

ACT has been very fortunate to obtain all of these qualities in the person of Miss Debra S. Gelman, a Master's candidate in Drama at Tufts University. Debbie has acted in and taught children's theatre while taking her undergraduate degree at State University of New York. She also has performed professionally and in community theatre, and has been a drama counselor at summer camps as well.

Debbie's full schedule has not altered her academic excellence
- her undergraduate degree was awarded cum laude, earning her a scholarship to Tufts University.
Among other honors, she attained the Dean's List and was elected to the National Honor Society. Her professional credits include the role of Princess in Aladdin, presented by the Peter Piper Players Children's Theatre of Buffalo, New York. While working professionally, she found time to participate in the Williamsville Circle Theatre, a community theatre. In this group, Debbie played lead roles in Cat on a Hot tin Roof and After the Fall.

The Andover Community
Theatre is privileged to obtain the talents of such a busy and experienced individual. The membership of ACT cordially invites you to attend its production of The Merry Pranks of Tyll directed by Debbie Gelman.

Tickets are now on sale at Resnick's, Thompson's, The Spa,
Corner Cupboard and Cole's Hardware in Andover. For

Outing Club Is Active

Tonight at 5:30 marks the deadline for reservations for the two weekend programs planned by the Andover - North Andover YMCA Outing Club. One group leaves at 7 a.m. on Saturday for a two day mountain climbing expedition to Mts. Jefferson and Adams, with an overnight stay at Gray Knob cabin. Ed Condon is Trip Director.

A second option for Club members is a one day program this Saturday consisting of a horseback trail ride in Salem, N.
H. under Trip Director James Munn, followed by a cookout and outdoor game program at the Lawrence YMCA Day Camp site.
This group will leave at 9:15 a.m.

Reservations must also be made by tonight for a two day canoe trip on the Saco River in Maine, under Trip Director Bob Kent, which will take place May 12 & 13. Firm reservations of canoes necessitates this early sign up.

The Outing Club is open to boys and girls in grades 4-9. Earlier in April two Spring Term events included a bicycle hike to Ipswich Wildlife Sanctuary which attracted 24 participants and a one day canoe trip on the Concord River with 20 members participating. In addition to the two day canoe trip a climb to Mt.

An Educational Viewpoint From Down Under

THE TOWNSMAN, APRIL 26, 1973

By Helen M. Eccles
Peter Gebhardt is a long lanky Australian educator with humorous piercing eyes, a keen, far-reaching intellect grounded in common sense, and a preoccupation with the goals of education.

His sense of perspective sits naturally on a man from a country as large as America, but whose interior is mostly vast stretches of hundreds of miles of unpeopled, seemingly barren, landscape.

Gebhardt thinks that educators should be constantly checking their long-range goals for education, and whether they need to adjust their methods to come closer to the goals.

This headmaster of All Saint's College, a private secondary school in Bathurst, Australia, not far from Sydney, visited Andover High School Tuesday, and came away saying that the high school's programs for bringing the community into the school, and its programs for sending students out into the real worlds of the community are "right on target."

Gebhardt was speaking with keenest interest and respect of the Recreation - Community Schools adult education programs, and community resource programs that bring the Andover community into the schools, and Andover High School programs that confront students with community realities: the child care course that has run a nursery school right in the high school, and the four programs that send students out to work beside adults in the community - (1) the intern program, in municipal, health care and other fields, (2) the educational involvement program in teaching younger students, (3) the new student-initiated Alternative Interest program where students contract to work in the community for credit but no pay, and (4) the work-study program, the longest running of the community programs for students.

The striking fact of the visit was the mutuality of concerns between the Australian private headmaster and the Andover public high school headmaster, and the superintendent, though their schools are separated by half a world of distance and by the line dividing the public and the private domain.

The Australian headmaster had mentioned the community school concept the day before in a TOWNSMAN interview in the study of his old friend and host, Theodore Sizer, Phillips Academy's headmaster. He told the TOWNSMAN that he saw a great need for schools to become community schools, to open up education to the adults in the community and put students out into the community to work alongside people of all ages, "and not just dabbling, either."

"Education must be the means whereby a child comes to understand the social environment in which he is living, and will live in, as it is, and as it ought or might be. Unless he knows what it is now, he hasn't made a start."

Would Mr. Gebhardt like to visit a public school which has made a real beginning with the community school concept? He would. A visit to Andover High school was arranged, and Principal Philip Wormwood made himself available early on Tuesday morning. Wormwood had spent many months in Australia during World War II, but the men found they had some essential educational philosophy in common as well. Both see the same issues confronting schools - financing, student participation, development of programs dealing with the outside world, problems of meeting change. Gebhardt paid tribute to Wormwood, "who obviously has been keeping himself flexible to deal with change - that's not the easy or the lazy way, intellectually or physically. It takes intellectual courage and intellectual and physical energy." Wormwood noted that in Australia, which is considered isolated, the change factor may even be harsher, felt even more harshly than in America, as modern technology imposes itself, and outside capital rushes in to cash in on Australia's vast natural resources.

Gebhardt, Wormwood and Superintendent Dr. Kenneth Seifert, whom they joined later in the morning, share a belief that education is for all ages, and that a chief purpose of education is to get students to confront, to begin to understand all sorts and ages and lifestyles and varieties of people, to cross boundaries between different kinds of people.

Anyone who thinks Gebhardt's interest in confronting students with different worlds and varieties of people means "watering down" or deemphasizing curriculum would be quite mistaken. Gebhardt's observation is that in Australia, the Academy ought to be harder than they are, and educators shouldn't be a set academic or behavioral standards which students will stiff. The quality about America Peter Gebhardt finds attractive is its great diversity, much greater in either Australia or America. "Yes, America gets diversity," Dr. Seifert commented. "That was the stage, getting this diversity. The second stage is learning to live with the diversity, a pluralistic society where the three educators agree what they are all after. Education has the major role."

Peter Gebhardt's association with America began nearly 20 years ago. He had been in South Australia, educating at Geelong Grammar School, then at Etton of Australia, where Charles was sent to study at the University of Melbourne, for law, but teaching, first at the School, then in Sidney. He then went to Harvard's Graduate School of Education ten years ago. He became close friends with Ted Sizer, and his wife, who had spent a year in Australia. Christina Gebhardt up a nursery school in the basement, a boon to Narbonne who was juggling the demands of motherhood, graduate school, and being wife of a university dean. The Gebhardts stayed a second year, when Peter at Milton Academy.

The Gebhardts returned to Australia, where Gebhardt became headmaster of Saints' College, a school traditionally has educated rural Australians. He has hit Australia's six years of drought, the falling out of the wool and wheat quotas. Australian dependent schools do the endowments of American dependent schools, and says one of his major home will be to try to be able to educate students whose parents no longer afford the tuition. Peter Gebhardt is not in America for five weeks, a biblical leave, and return to England to find his former headmaster now a fellow headmaster at Phillips Academy. Gebhardt proves the diversity of Phillips. He said he Sizer's plans to increase international population at Phillips Academy through changes, and his goal of coed Phillips Academy for being a national school mean that Sizer's high educational standards are appropriate to the diversity of America.

be quite mistaken. Gebhardt's observation is that Phillips Academy ought to be working harder than they are, and that educators shouldn't be afraid to set academic or behavior standards which students will find stiff.

The quality about America that Peter Gebhardt finds most attractive is its great diversity, and variety, much greater than in either Australia or England. "Yes, America gets a plus for diversity," Dr. Seifert commented. "That was the first stage, getting this diversity. Now the second stage is learning how to live with the diversity, making a pluralistic society work." That, the three educators agree, is what they are all after, and education has the major task.

Peter Gebhardt's association with America began nearly ten years ago. He had been born in South Australia, educated at Geelong Grammar School ("the Eton of Australia," where Prince Charles was sent to school), studied at the University of Melbourne, for law, but turned to teaching, first at the Geelong School, then in Sidney. He came to Harvard's Graduate School of Education ten years ago with his bride of two days, and they quickly became close friends of the new Dean of the Graduate School Ted Sizer, and his wife Nancy, who had spent a year teaching in Australia. Christina Gebhardt set up a nursery school in the Sizers' basement, a boon to Nancy Sizer, who was juggling the demands of motherhood, graduate studies and being wife of a university dean. The Gebhardts stayed for a second year, when Peter taught at Milton Academy.

The Gebhardts returned to Australia, where Gebhardt soon became headmaster of All Saints' College, a school which traditionally has educated many rural Australians. Hard times have hit Australia's ranchers - six years of drought, the bottom falling out of the wool market and wheat quotas. Australian independent schools do not have the endowments of American independent schools, and Gebhardt says one of his major jobs back home will be to try to raise funds to be able to educate more rural students whose parents can no longer afford the tuitions.

Peter Gebhardt is now visiting America for five weeks on a sabbatical leave, and returns to New England to find his former dean now a fellow headmaster, at Phillips Academy. Gebhardt approves of the diversity already at Phillips. He said headmaster Sizer's plans to increase the international population at Phillips Academy through foreign exchanges, and his goal of making a coed Phillips Academy responsible for being a national public school mean that Sizer has set a high educational goal, appropriate to the diversity and variety of America.

Business Conference At Center

A special one day conference to acquaint local businessmen with procurement opportunities in the federal and private sector of the economy will be held May 4 at the Christian Formation Center, Andover, Congressman Paul Cronin (R-Mass) announced today.

Representatives of 22 Federal departments and agencies will be on hand at the Business Opportunity/Federal Procurement Conference which is being sponsored by Congressman Cronin in conjunction with the Greater Lawrence and Greater Lowell Chambers of Commerce.

The conference, said Cronin, "is a unified effort by Federal, civilian and military agencies, prime contractors, and local sponsors to acquaint local businessmen with procurement opportunities in the Federal and private sector of the economy."

Cronin noted that records show that "all too many small business organizations miss out on sales opportunities because they lack basic prime and sub-contract information."

The conference, he added, "will provide detailed procurement information and instruction on how to enhance the chances of selling products or services to the federal government or to one of its contractors."

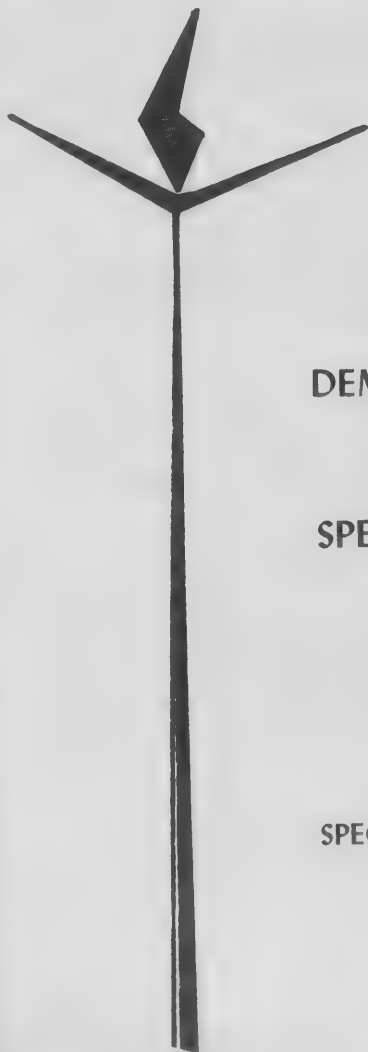

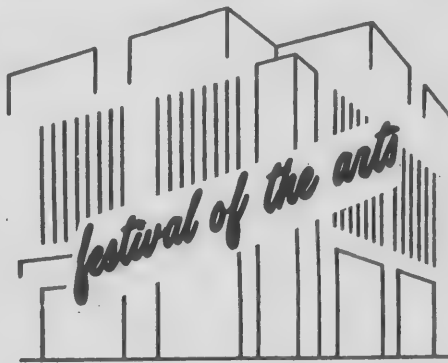

Representatives of the 22 Federal departments and agencies will provide information on how to sell goods and services to the Federal government and how businessmen and firms can avail themselves of the programs within the agencies.

Congressman Cronin, now in his first term representing the Fifth Congressional District, has been instrumental in assisting local area businesses to obtain an increasing share of Federal contracts.

Since taking office in January, his district has seen Federal contract commitments averaging well over a million dollars a day.

"The opportunity for even greater results is the prime reason for scheduling the conference," Cronin pointed out. "It would take a businessman several months and cost him thousands of dollars to obtain the vast amount of procurement information which will be available at this conference."

Representatives of major prime contractors, he added, will also be present.

Guidance Program At College

Programs Unlimited, Merrimack College, is presenting an evening entitled "The Guidance Counselor's Role in Today's School and the School of the Future" on Sunday, April 29, 8 p.m. in Room 301, Lounge, Student Union Building, (Gildea Hall).

Speakers actively engaged in counselling at each level of education will direct their remarks to some of the problems which beset the administration, faculty and students in today's schools. Their answers may have a direct bearing in our guidance systems of the future. Many administrators have seen the role of the guidance counselor become an impossible dream due to large student population. In these cases, the teacher has had to assume a dual role.

Some counselors at the secondary school level find they can serve one need, that being of job-career director, a frustrating experience for student and counselor at best.

The administrator today, with austerity as his criterion must sometimes regard "the rap session" as a luxury his system simply cannot afford.

Students at the college level have voiced their displeasure at the fact they can never really get "too close" to their counselor who, because of limited staff and budget, is doing the work of three. Can the guidance problems which erupt in the classroom be handled there, effectively?

Does the old-fashioned bug-a-boo of only needing a counselor when the student is in trouble still prevail in some areas?

Counselors on the panel, after their presentation will welcome open discussion, the moderator will be Mary Ellen Evans.

Wine and cheese, coffee and dessert will be served.

Buffet Supper

Court St. Monica, 783, Catholic Daughters of America, will conduct a public buffet supper

Onions A Popular In Garden

Onions, once fairly local gardens, may come to tomatoes in popular summer, according to from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture. Seedsmen and garden selling onion sets for almost as fast as weigh them out.

The reasons for fragrant activity is course. Onions - where be found at all - are a week for 45¢ a pound a main supply comes from where the onion crop was destroyed by last hurricanes. New Michigan also supply onions, but the poor season last year resulted crops there, too.

Vegetable prices are so high that interest in denying is at fever pitch State, and thousands who previously thought produce came from far busy turning their lawns producing areas. telephone requests to are on the increase, and has not been reached.

Greenhouse-grown onions once a very popular hereabouts, are this year non-existent. The tender cukes, valued delicate flavor and no qualities, are to be found specialty growers, but be almost out of sight.

The problem here natural disasters, but growing. Range after greenhouses have been for residential building the cost of required fuel oil, land taxes and wages all add up to situation.

Greenhouse tomato plentiful Massachusetts will also be in shorter season, for the same. Unless you grow your may have to be satisfied Florida crop, bred with boxing gloves to packaging machinery flavor to match.

The weather there however, seem cooperating very well the disastrous planting a year ago. Observers MDA are optimistic crops, whether corn grown or nurtured in yard. Some early peas, are already in while corn fields are in preparation. Corn planted in May. Then early vegetables that if planted now.

To Attend Summer Institute

Merrimack College Biology Professor, Dr. Aubrey S. Thomas, Jr. of Andover has been selected to participate in a National Science Foundation Summer Institute for College Biology Teachers at the University of Tennessee at Knoxville. The N.S.F. Summer Institute is entitled "Field Sampling and Domestication of Cryptogamic Plants."

Cryptogamic plants include those plants which do not produce flowers or seeds and are

Dr. Aubrey S. Thomas, Jr.

Onions Are Popular In Gardens

Onions, once fairly rare in local gardens, may compete with tomatoes in popularity this summer, according to reports from the Massachusetts Department of Agriculture (MDA). Seedsmen and garden shops are selling onion sets for home gardens almost as fast as they can weigh them out.

The reasons for all this fragrant activity is price, of course. Onions - where they can be found at all - are selling this week for 45¢ a pound and up. Our main supply comes from Texas, where the onion crop was almost destroyed by last fall's hurricanes. New York and Michigan also supply many of our onions, but the poor growing season last year resulted in short crops there, too.

Vegetable prices generally are so high that interest in home gardening is at fever pitch in the Bay State, and thousands of people who previously thought fresh produce came from factories are busy turning their lawns into food producing areas. Mail and telephone requests to the MDA are on the increase, and the peak has not been reached.

Greenhouse-grown cucumbers, once a very popular staple hereabouts, are this year almost non-existent. The tender, unwaxed cukes, valued for their delicate flavor and non-repeating qualities, are to be found at a few specialty growers, but prices will be almost out of sight.

The problem here is not natural disasters, but the cost of growing. Range after range of greenhouses have been sold off for residential building, because the cost of required low-sulphur fuel oil, land taxes and minimum wages all add up to a no-profit situation.

Greenhouse tomatoes, once a plentiful Massachusetts crop, will also be in shorter supply this season, for the same reasons. Unless you grow your own, you may have to be satisfied with the Florida crop, bred with skins like boxing gloves to survive the packaging machinery, and with flavor to match.

The weather this spring, however, seems to be cooperating very well, following the disastrous planting season of a year ago. Observers in the MDA are optimistic about 1973 crops, whether commercially grown or nurtured in the back yard. Some early crops, like peas, are already in the ground, while corn fields are well along in preparation. Corn is generally planted in May. There are many early vegetables that will do well if planted now.

usually identified as lower members of the plant kingdom. Examples of cryptogamic plants would include algae, fungi, ferns, mosses, liverworts, and lichens. Dr. Thomas and the other professors plan to bring these native wild plants into the laboratory and greenhouse in order to establish a permanent culture of these organisms for demonstration and research purposes.

Dr. Thomas has previously participated in a National Science Foundation Ecology Institute at the University of North Carolina in Summer, 1968 and an Atomic Energy Commission Radiation Biology Institute at the University of Kansas in Summer, 1970.

A member of the Merrimack College faculty since 1967, Dr. Thomas received his B.Ed. degree in Mathematics and Science from Keene State College in 1962. He pursued graduate studies in Botany with a special concentration in Plant Physiology and received his M. S. degree from the University of New Hampshire in 1964. He was awarded the Ph.D. degree from the University of New Hampshire in 1967. His doctoral dissertation was entitled: "Influence of Light Quality and Intensity on Carbohydrate Metabolism in Plants."

A member of the National Association of Biology Teachers, Dr. Thomas is a member of the New England Botanical Club and the Botanical Society of America. He is also an active member of the Merrimack College Club of the Society of Sigma Xi as well as a member of the American Society of Plant Physiologists and the American Association for the Advancement of Science.

At Merrimack, Dr. Thomas teaches undergraduate courses in Botany, Plant Physiology, and General Biology.

He is married to the former Satoko Nagaoka and they reside in Andover.

Appearing At Dinner Theater

Paul, a resident of North Andover, is currently appearing at the Chanticleer Dinner Theater as Bobby Van Heusen "a terribly rich and handsome American" in "The Boy Friend." Paul says he thinks it was type casting. After that statement, he roars with laughter. Paul and eleven young Bostonians display their acting, singing, and dancing talents in this "Twenty's spoof."

Paul, a graduate of the University of Maryland in Theatre, has appeared in several dinner theatre productions such as "Jesus Christ Superstar," "Gypsy," and "Man of La Mancha." Since he has moved to the Boston area for his "try-out run" Paul has become a member of both the Garrett Players and the Andover Community Theatre. He appeared as Victor Velasco in ACT's production of "Barefoot in the Park." Paul is a staunch supporter of community theatre efforts.

When asked about his future aspirations, Paul said, "if an actor chooses theatre, he goes to New York; if he chooses television or motion pictures, then it's California."

Eye Make-Up and Mercury Pollution

By Polly Bradley

Last Saturday night when I got all dressed up in my Indonesian batik skirt, my gold blouse, and my tiger's-eye necklace and earrings to go to the theatre, my husband looked at me and asked, "Why aren't you wearing any eye make-up tonight?"

I was a little peeved. "You mean, here I am in my prettiest outfit, and all you notice is that I'm wearing my normal little squinty eyes instead of my big, round, artificial owl eyes?"

"Honey, you look great to me any way," Larry gave me a hug, which naturally squeezed out 99 percent of my irritation. "It's just that you usually put on eye make-up with that outfit."

"I've quit wearing eye make-up," I announced.

"What tangent are you off on now?" said Larry.

"Tangent, nothing," I said indignantly. "The Food and Drug Administration has banned the use of mercury compounds in cosmetics and skin-bleaching preparations - but not in eye make-up."

"Why not eye make-up?" asked Larry.

"The mercury kills the germs in the make-up, and it seemed wiser to permit a small amount of mercury in eye make-up than to cause an increase in eye infections, which could endanger some women's eyes."

"So now you have a choice between mercury or no eye make-up."

"I hope they can eventually find a safer substitute for mercury compounds in eye make-up. Surely they can find something else which will prevent bacterial contamination."

"Well, honey, you don't look squinty eyed to me. Go ahead and give up the eye make-up. I don't like the idea of your putting poison on your eyes, even in small amounts."

"It bothers me to think how much of it I've used all these years, and the amount of other cosmetics that I've used which may have had mercury compounds in them until January 5th, when they were banned. With all the various odd chemicals that are spread around the environment these days, I like to keep my personal contamination to a minimum, at least."

"Were the mercury compounds widely used?"

"Yes, they were used as preservatives in hand and body lotions and creams, bath oils, hair preparations, deodorants, preparations for bleaching of dark skin and removal of age spots, and various different kinds of cosmetics. But that is stopped now, I'm happy to say."

Larry looked at my necklace. "But don't you feel a little guilty still wearing those tiger's-eyes? Tigers are an endangered species, you know."

I gave him a (gentle) punch. "You joker. Those are little rocks, not eyes."

Parrots Become Complex

Not every parrot that flies by is necessarily a monk parakeet.

We mention this because since 1912 when the last known Carolina parakeet died in the Cincinnati Zoo, z.U.S. birders have not been bothered much with the problem of identifying wild parrots. Occasionally one might see the thick-billed parrot of Mexico along the Arizona border, but otherwise any parrot-like bird in the wild probably had escaped quite recently from a cage.

Now the parrot business has become more complex.

One has the possibility of seeing in the wild three species of parrots and occasionally a fourth species. We will dismiss the fourth species by describing it as the small parakeet one sees for sale in dime store pet shops. When it escapes or is turned loose, it generally dies quite promptly.

The other three, however, may be encountered anywhere between Florida and New Hampshire and as far west as Michigan. And at any time of year. At present there are small colonies of the birds scattered over a vast stretch of real estate. Ornithologists no longer are surprised when a report of parrots present comes from any eastern state.

Perhaps we first should define the word "parakeet" and explain why we often refer to them as "parrots." A parakeet is a small parrot whose tail is longer than its body.

The parakeets now thriving in the wild are: monk parakeet, ring-necked parakeet and canary-winged parakeet.

Since the monk parakeet has been present in the wild longer than the other two, there has been a general tendency to refer to any larger parakeet as a "monk parrot."

The giant of the lot is the ring-necked parakeet. It is 16 inches long. It has a bright red bill, green body and the male wears a dark collar. It is a native of India.

The smallest — although quite a bit larger than the dime store parakeet — is the canary-winged parakeet. It is nine inches long. It has a horn-colored beak and wears bright yellow patches on its green wings. A parakeet that gives conspicuous yellow flashes from the wings as it flies probably is the canary-winged. The ring-necked has some yellow feathers in the wing lining but they are less likely to flash yellow. The canary-winged is a native of the Amazon basin.

The commonest and perhaps most widely spread of the parakeets is the monk parakeet. It is 12 inches long. It has a flesh-colored beak, a pale green body and gray forecrown and breast. It sometimes is called the Quaker parrot or gray-breasted parakeet. The monk parakeet is a native of Argentina.

The monk parakeet definitely has adapted to North America. It has reversed its breeding season (the South American summer corresponds to our winter) and now brings off young successfully as far north as New York and Michigan. How well the others have adapted has not been determined. Their widespread occurrence hints that they may have managed to cope with the North American climate.

Birds Are Problems

As most pilots know, there's more than soot in the air space less than 10,000 feet above ground.

Since money is involved, scientists have been working at least a decade to lower crash risks and bird-strike costs through a better understanding of bird flight patterns and reducing the attractiveness of airports to birds.

One evidence of this may be seen by looking into the evening sky near any city. Long before darkness, aircraft flying below 10,000 feet will have their powerful searchlights turned on. They are following the suggestion of a team of scientists which included V.E.F. Solman of the Canadian Wildlife Service. The scientists' radar observations indicate that migrating birds veer away from aircraft when they see the lights. A decided reduction in aircraft strikes where the suggestion has been employed tends to confirm the supposition.

"There are ways of killing a wood pigeon for less than $300,000 each, but that's the cost if you use a Boeing 747 engine..."

Police, schools and social workers who have seen juvenile delinquents as "somebody else's problem" now have to find a solution within their own communities, says the state Department of Youth Services head.

Joseph Leavey, acting commissioner, thinks his agency with the best of intentions created a "ladder" of prevention on which an eight-year runaway becomes a 15-year car thief and a 21-year safecracker.

"We used to institutionalize kids, taking them away from support of their communities, their families," he says, "naturally they taught each crime. The worse the offense, the greater the status."

"We're closing the institutions, and communities have to look for someone to bail them out with children they're used to thinking of as somebody else's problem."

Mr. Leavey sees more attention to family therapy, greater local understanding, only way out of the juvenile delinquent / adult criminal drome.

"Professionals want to prevent systems," he says, "but society only reacts to crisis. We can only get more 'deal with' kids, not to put their problems in the place."

The way out? The community which have treated juvenile delinquents as human beings ("They aren't the toughest but they are the most frustrated and angry kids," Mr. Leavey says.) have had success in turning parents into the rehabilitative process.

"Sixty per cent of the kids deal with are from broken homes," he says. "Their parents are a good part of the problem and of the solution. You can't all families together (a department has some youngsters in group homes about 300 in foster homes) you try to work on any emotional strengths you have. Somebody's real mother is better than the institution."

Cities and towns which made a real effort to help offenders, he's found, are calls from other parents to avert a possible crisis.

"Not weak to ask," he says, "We have to get away from the idea that it's weak to ask for help," he says, "by making counseling services available not compulsory but available to the local level."

With institutions closing, Leavey hopes to lop off the tail in his department and use

Beacon Hill Observations

By Bill Kirtz

Police, schools and social workers who have seen juvenile delinquents as "somebody else's problem" now have to find alternatives within their own communities, says the state's Department of Youth Services head.

Joseph Leavey, acting commissioner, thinks his agency - with the best of intentions - has created a "ladder" of progression on which an eight-year-old runaway becomes a 15-year-old car thief and a 21-year-old safecracker.

"We used to institutionalize the kids, taking them away from the support of their communities and their families," he says, "and naturally they taught each other crime. The worse the offense, the greater the status."

"We're closing the institutions, and communities will have to look for someone else to bail them out with children they're used to thinking of as somebody else's problem."

Mr. Leavey sees more attention to family therapy and greater local understanding the only way out of the juvenile delinquent / adult criminal syndrome.

"Professionals want better prevention systems," he says, "but society only reacts to a crisis. We can only get money to 'deal with' kids, not to prevent their problems in the first place."

The way out? The communities which have treated juvenile delinquents as human beings ("They aren't the toughest kids, but they are the most frustrated and angry kids," Mr. Leavey says.) have had success in drawing parents into the whole rehabilitative process.

"Sixty per cent of the kids we deal with are from broken homes," he says. "Their parents are a good part of the problem - and of the solution. You can't pull all families together (and his department has some 800 youngsters in group homes and about 300 in foster homes) but you try to work on any kind of emotional strengths you can. Somebody's real mother or father is better than the nicest institution."

Cities and towns which have made a real effort to help young offenders, he's found, are getting calls from other parents in time to avert a possible crisis.

"Not weak to ask" "We have to get away from the idea that it's weak to ask for help," he says, "by making more counseling services available - not compulsory but available - on the local level."

With institutions closing, Mr. Leavey hopes to lop off 500 jobs in his department and use the $2 million thus saved to contract for more community-based youth service programs.

Juvenile crime statistics - official ones, anyway - follow income patterns. Eight-eight per cent of the youths Mr. Leavey's department deals with come from families on welfare; 35 per cent are black. There are few Puerto Ricans who draw the department's attention - mainly, the acting commissioner feels, because police find the language barrier too much of a hassle to work around.

In suburbia, the same number of youngsters steal cars, skip school and run away from home. But when a policeman picks them up, Mr. Leavey says, "he drops them off at their house instead of the station house."

The suburbs, too, tend to have better guidance programs. City policemen, lacking those resources, "dump them on the courts which in turn dump them on us."

The Youth Services department's whole relationship with law enforcement agencies must change, Mr. Leavey maintains:

"We have to keep kids out of the court system and the delinquency culture. We can't remove from their roots and isolate them. While we try to see youngsters as individuals, though, police say 'We catch them and you let them go.'"

Actually, Mr. Leavey is convinced, the social workers and the cop who pulls a 15-year-old out of a car (whose ignition he was probably taught to jump while in one or another state institution) have the same function: to stop crime.

"It costs $10 thousand a year to institutionalize a kid," he says. "We could pay policemen more and let them each relate to a few youngsters, but in the current situation that's just not their job."

"Like human beings" Now, however, it's not a county training school's job, it's a community's job to treat juvenile offenders "like human beings."

"Our department doesn't have all the answers," he admits. "We should evaluate, contract for and monitor local service. We'll never totally solve the problem, but once communities see juvenile delinquents as human beings, we'll start toward a workable solution."

The alternative? Well 98 per cent of the youngsters first committed to a state institution (some as young as seven, for running away from home) return.

"They like it there," Mr. Leavey explains. "The only friends, young or old, they've made are in there."

If a youth's own community isn't a friend to him, this suggests, youngsters will never get out of the vicious circle exemplified by a Leavey anecdote: "A boy I know wants to be a safecracker, because that's how you get to Walpole."

What Our Readers Say-

To the Editor of the TOWNSMAN:

In recent weeks there has been a regrettable decline in objectivity in the debate concerning policies of the school administration. The use of inflammatory rhetoric, phrases such as "credibility gap" and "crisis of confidence" only serves to obscure the real issues. We are not dealing here with complex national or international questions; these are local problems of educational policy. The alternatives are well defined. Honest differences of opinion exist and all sides are entitled to be heard - free from a "campaign atmosphere."

The question of achievement testing in our elementary grades is a case in point. Mr. Lyons of the school committee proposed across-the-board SAT's this year, while Dr. Seifert's original plans called for only sample testing. The wisest course of action in circumstances such as this would be a "middle-of-the-road" approach - one that incorporates the best features of each point of view. Dr. Seifert came to the last school committee meeting, prepared to offer such a compromise testing program. What followed was a real steam roller job. He was not even extended the courtesy of being asked for his recommendations on the matter and the full testing program was pushed through. Compromise can not be achieved under conditions such as this, or by appeals to emotionalism and hostility. Now many hours of valuable classroom time will be consumed administering tests which have large sections of obsolete material or does not pertain to the Andover curriculum. What a waste!

I think it is time for all of us to cool off and start working together in a spirit of reconciliation - the school administration, the school committee, and the townspeople. Providing good education for our children deserves our best efforts.

Musical Worship Service

The community is invited to "Simple Gifts," - a musical worship service of special historical and musical interest, an authentic representation of Early American Sacred Folk Music, beginning at 11 a.m. at Cochran Chapel, on Chapel Avenue.

Abbot and Phillips Academy vocal and instrumental music students under the direction of musical instructor William Schneider, who will also play string bass, will lead the congregation in psalms and hymns from the early 17th century Ainsworth and Bay Psalm Books, spiritual folksongs from the southeastern mountain revival meeting tradition and Shaker religious ritual.

The service grows out of a February Week project of the students, who researched the materials for an authentic presentation, and have been rehearsing the music for public presentation under Schneider, sponsor of the project.

The colonial tradition will be represented by Psalm 119, from the Bay Psalm Book, first book published in America, and Psalm 150 from the Ainsworth Psalter, published in Holland in 1612, and brought to America by the English Separatists who settled at Plymouth in 1620. Sunday's congregation will sing the psalms line for line, after the choir, just as the early Massachusetts settlers did. Because books were very scarce in early America, the colonists learned their hymns and psalms by this "lining out" procedure.

The hymns and offertory anthem Sunday will be spiritual folksongs - The hymns are so-called "white spirituals" from the tradition of the camp-meeting - the popular revival meetings held by wandering ministers.

Three Shaker tunes will be sung, played and acted out for the anthem. Shakers practiced simplicity, humility and self-control, but found self-expression in the song and dance of their religious ritual. The first Shaker tunes were wordless, sung with nonsense syllables or snatches of psalms, accompanied by dances made from natural movements like marches and "devotional exercises." Shaker families would invent new songs and dances during the week and present them as "gifts" to the whole community on Sunday. Thus the title of Sunday's service - "Simple Gifts"

Gray Owl Raises Questions

By Wayne Hanley

The unexpected appearance of a great gray owl in Massachusetts raises questions about birders.

Since a great gray owl arrives in the New England southern tier about once in a half-century and southern New England has an ample supply of birders, there was quite a stampede into Gill, Mass., to see the bird.

In the first two days a plantation of seedling trees which grew in a field along the approach to the owl perch took a rather thorough beating. The Town of Gill worried a few harried hours over the fact that birders were parking their cars in front of the engine house of the volunteer fire department, blocking machinery that fortunately did not have to be used. And the normally quiet town had a great influx of strangers at a season when strangers are not expected.

Fortunately, for the sanity of Gill residents, the owl took a 10-day leave.

Now, once again the problem exists: should birders be rationed peeks at the great gray owl? If so, who does the rationing? How can a small town cope with such a celebrity?

A few years ago, some of these conflicts were resolved after sundown by some resident of the town. But, today the great gray owl, as are all owls and hawks, is protected by federal law. Killing one can bring a stiff fine and/or brief jail residency.

Twenty years ago when birders were relatively few, the sighting of an unusual bird might attract a dozen persons, unless it was in the Boston metropolitan area where a few dozen might be expected. Today an unexpected bird can attract hundreds almost anywhere. In fact, there are persons who would fly from Washington or Philadelphia for a guaranteed sight of a great gray owl.

The factors involved in such a situation require birders to be sensitive to the rights of others when approaching the scene where a rarity occurs. When it comes to tramping across a planted field, the person whose livelihood is attached to that soil will find a horde of birders as unwelcome as a horde of hunters or motorcycle riders, or a church picnic for that matter.

Normally great gray owls remain the year-round in the coniferous forests of northwestern Canada. Occasionally one appears in northern Vermont, New Hampshire or Maine.

David E. Young of Andover, president, will preside. Business items on the agenda include: the election of new officers and directors; adopting a budget for the fiscal year that begins May 1; receiving reports from the Minister, church committees and Board of Directors, and voting on proposed by-law revisions. The meeting will be preceded by a social hour during which members will have opportunity to view the Gallery display of the 8th Annual Arts Show at the church.

Naming Of Child Historical

The custom of naming a newly born Jewish baby girl at a religious service is to be fulfilled this Sabbath Eve., April 27, by Mr. and Mrs. Lee Weiner.

This naming ceremony will celebrate a special joyous event at Temple Emanuel, 483 Lowell Street, Lawrence, since it marks a fourth generation Temple family. The parents of Stephanie Sarah Weiner were both confirmed at Temple Emanuel. The father's mother, Mrs. Ruth Trilling Weiner, as well as the mother's mother, Mrs. Selma Warshaw Frankel, were also confirmed at Temple Emanuel.

The great grandparents of Stephanie Sarah Weiner, Mr. and Mrs. Max Warshaw and Mr. and Mrs. Leo Trilling were amongst the founding families of Temple

Emanuel in 1919.

An added highlight of this Sabbath Eve. Service baby naming includes the presence at the service of a great grandmother, Mrs. Max Warshaw, as well as the attendance of a great, great uncle, M. J. Caplan, who is also listed amongst the founding families of Temple Emanuel.

Religion is one thing that is never worn out by everyday use.

Statements Not Needed

The U. S. Environmental Protection Agency reports that environmental impact statements would not be required for two construction projects in Essex County.

Wallace E. Stickney, Chief of the Regional EPA's Environmental Impact Branch, explained that impact statements would not be required for the projects of the Greater Lawrence Sanitary District and the City of Haverhill, because they would not be significantly detrimental to the quality of the environment.

The District's project is stage I of a pollution abatement plan and consists of a secondary wastewater treatment facility, interceptor sewers, a pumping station and force main. The project is located in Lawrence, Methuen and North Andover.

Haverhill's project consists of the construction of a secondary water pollution control plant, the Bradford Interceptor and a pumping station with associated force main.

Mr. Stickney noted that an environmental impact appraisal, which summarizes EPA's review and the reasons why an impact statement is not required is on file at the Boston office of his agency and is available for public review upon request.

The Bridge

Solution to the Shawsheen traffic situation in and around the Shetland Mills property seems quite easy.

Open the Bailey Bridge, as suggested by the residents of York street who are now being plagued by the rather bright economic outlook of the mill properties as evidenced by the traffic on their street.

It was closed a couple of years ago, after Raytheon moved to their new plant in West Andover. Residents of Kenilworth street and Riverina Road, asked the board to keep the bridge closed and compliance followed.

But the York street residents were not heard from at that time.

Their street is the driveway to the parking lots of the mill properties. They are the ones who bear the brunt of the traffic.

No doubt at the public hearing to be scheduled there will be a neighborhood difference of opinion as to the effect of traffic, hazards and so forth.

But, with the bridge opened, there is another access and egress to the parking lots, thus some relief.

Regionally

Regionalism is a desirable method of solving substantial problems of an area in an economic and satisfactory manner.

It is probably the most conducive approach to solving situations which prove costly to correct, but are in need of attention.

The theory of regionalism works well until it comes time to implement a recommended program and one community bears the brunt of the solution.

Such seems to be the case with the recommended site for a regional landfill operation.

Engineering studies made of the Greater Lawrence area and its problems relating to solid waste disposal, pointed to a Methuen location as the regional solution to the matter.

Naturally, and as could be expected, Methuen balked soundly at the thought of becoming the dumping grounds for Greater Lawrence.

Invoking a theory which accepts a logical solution to a matter, provided it does not involve our back yard, Methuen officials loudly protested the selection with the result that it is back to the drawing boards for the regional study commission.

Other alternatives have been suggested, such as each community sharing the burden for periods of time. This seems an unlikely solution, since Andover has no landfill operation, per town meeting vote and North Andover is rapidly running out of available space at its location.

We must be sympathetic toward Methuen's feelings in the matter, for assuredly, we would react similarly if the recommended location had been our community.

Concerted effort on the part of Greater Lawrence officials and the regional study commission now seems mandatory.

State insistence on elimination of pollution, ecological barriers currently incumbent with area landfill and dump operations will require compliance.

A regional solution seems to be the only answer.

How best to accomplish this should be a prime consideration among Greater Lawrence officials in order to avoid being ordered to resolve the problem by state or federal agencies, which generally proves more costly and cumbersome.

Cleanup

Saturday will mark a significant day for Andover.

Scouting groups and the Jaycees will be on a concentrated drive to clean up areas of town of litter.

The Jaycees will be working in the area around the dump. Their civic mindedness is to be applauded. The area has been considered a mess for some time through debris blowing from the dump area and litterbugs strewing the section with unwanted material.

The Scouts, following through on their pledge to perform good deeds will also be working in the area of the landfill, as well as other sections of the town.

The work of both groups is worthy of note and hopefully will focus attention on a continuing problem in Andover and all communities, that of litter prevention.

Traffic, is not the most pleasant thing in a residential area, but let us accept it as a way of life and share the problems that go with a successful business enterprise as posed by Shetland, one of the town's top taxpayers.

There have been comments about the gates of the bridge preventing youngsters from passage. This prevention measure has long been surmounted by the younger set.

Times change and adjustments must be made to meet the needs.

William M. Wood, in his dream village, built a garage to accommodate the vehicles of Shawsheen.

That garage would now have difficulty accommodating the cars of a single Shawsheen street.

Thus the reasonable solution to this problem seems to be a little hands across the water approach to provide relief to a neighborhood, residential problem.

Open the Bailey Bridge and share the burden and responsibility.

Off The Top

Andover's usually cheerful greeting at the entrance of town, Elm Square, is enhanced this time of year, by the spring blossoms.

From Elm street, the view is particularly eye-catching as motorists and pedestrians catch sight of the magnolia and other flowering shrubs in front of Memorial Hall library.

A call to the office this past week from an unidentified informant questioned whether we were aware of the number of unusual and colorful trees and shrubs that abound in Andover.

A check of the general area proves her questioning is worth an inspection of the general Andover landscape.

The particular specimens which captured her attention were a couple of cherry trees in full bloom in Spring Grove cemetery.

One of our other informants, passed along some 'vital' information also this past week.

For those whose interest lie in such things, there are 190 barrels on Route 93 from the Merrimack River bridge to Route 133.

The barrels are protective barriers for workmen reconstructing the bridge and highway, and we accept this token bit of information as fact without forwarding scouts to confirm the information.

Work on Temple place renovation is moving along well, from current observations.

Work to date on exteriors of some of the properties has resulted in a spruced up appearance.

Each year during the high school "prom" period, highway crashes increase in the Commonwealth.

In order to prevent another rash of serious accidents this year, the Registry of Motor Vehicles has issued the following notes for young drivers:

1. The right to purchase alcoholic beverages and to drink does not give you the right to drive under the influence or to buy liquor for use by a minor.

Although the law designates .10 blood level alcohol content as the level at which drivers are presumed to be driving under the influence, any number of drinks may impair physical and mental limits for safe driving.

Conviction of "driving under" carries a one-year mandatory revocation of license for the first such offense.

2. Operators with a Learner's Permit (over the age of 16) may not drive at any time unless accompanied by an operator over 21 who has a valid Massachusetts license which has been in effect for at least one year who must sit next to the driver.

Operators with a Learner's Permit (under the age of 18) may not drive between 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. unless accompanied by a parent or legal guardian with a valid Massachusetts license which has been in effect for at least one year who must sit next to the driver.

3. Licensed operators under the age of 18 must not drive between 1 a.m. to 5 a.m. unless accompanied by a parent or legal guardian.

Young drivers attending "proms" are urged not to treat this matter lightly. A license or learner's permit is a valuable possession and the holder of one has a responsibility to respect the laws which accompany it.

Spring may be a month old by the calendar, but hundreds of New Englanders will be celebrating the new season Saturday, April 28, at Boston's Museum of Science.

It's Earth Day at the Museum, and a full schedule of special programs will be offered.

In addition, children aged 12 or under who bring in 25 pounds of clean glass bottles to be recycled will receive free admission for that day only.

Earth Day programs will include ten different demonstrations covering a variety of subjects ranging from recycling to cider-making. Films, guided tours, and a slide-show will focus on ecology and nature. A children's Planetarium program will introduce youngsters to familiar celestial bodies and events.

Spring peepers will be on display in an exhibit on the signs of the season, and outdoor demonstrations of canoeing and fishing will be presented.

Visitors will be able to view plants and animals that live in an urban environment during a tour of outdoor sites near the Museum.

Richard M. Woodman, minister.

Annual Art Show Opens

The eighth annual art show of the Unitarian Universalist Church of Andover will open Saturday, April 28 from 2-5 and 7-9.

This highlight of the Church programming year will continue daily, free to the public, through Saturday, May 5.

A feature of this year's art show are two special portraits - "J.F.K." and "R.F.K." by Bert Fafard of Lawrence. They are on loan from the Kennedy library collection. In addition, Mr. Fafard will demonstrate charcoal sketching on three occasions during the show: Saturday from 2-5; Sunday from 2-5 and on Tuesday evening from 7-9.

As in the past three years, other special programs will be presented by the church during its art show, for which nominal admissions are charged.

Leading off the schedule is Saturday night's Old Film Festival - featuring shorts by W. C. Fields, Charlie Chaplin, the Keystone Cops, Wallace Beery, and Gloria Swanson and Buster Keaton. This begins at 8 p.m. allowing ample time to visit the art gallery.

On Sunday morning, April 29, classical guitarist Ronald Murray will take prominent part in the morning worship service, which begins at 10:30 a.m. Rev. Richard M. Woodman will conduct the service.

A newcomer to the programming schedule this year is the Andover Community Chorus, which will be on stage at 8 p.m. Wednesday night, May 2. Under the direction of Barry T. Low of North Andover, the chorus will sing selections from "Godspell" and "Fiddler on the Roof" as well as other show tunes.

On Friday evening, May 4, comes the second annual appearance of the New Black Eagle Jazz Band. The seven-member group will be in concert from 8:30 to midnight. Although all seven members of the group are professionals in other fields, their fame has come as jazz traditionalists, keeping alive the traditions of King Oliver, Louis Armstrong and other New Orleans jazz musicians.

Now a long-standing tradition at the Unitarian Church - Go Fly a Kite Sunday - will conclude the ten days of festivities. On that Sunday, May 6, parishioners and their friends bring kites and stay after church for kite flying and a picnic. Everyone is welcome - just bring a kite.

Memorial Hall Library

For Your Welfare

The last program in the library series on Health and Welfare will take place on May 10, 1973, Thursday evening, at 8 p.m. At that time two professional social workers from Lawrence General hospital will speak. Robert E. Dippold, Director of Social Services, will speak about hospital programs now in operation and those that may develop in the future primarily for the benefit of the elderly. Two social workers in his department will assist Mr. Dippold and expand on future programs - Mrs. Dorothy Flanagan and the Rev. Paul Clinton. The second half of the evening will be devoted to the Department of Home Health Services, Miss Estelle Devlin, Director. Her subject will be "Horizons in Home Care", an examination of the avenues of help available in the home when illness strikes. The program will be educational for all of us who are older, or who are responsible for an older person. Plan to attend.

Dimming Of Lights

Memorial Hall Library will cooperate with the American Library Association in a campaign to make townspeople aware of the loss of funds to libraries as a result of President Nixon's veto of FY73 appropriations through the Department of H.E.W. These appropriations are essential for services granted libraries under the Library Services and Construction Act and under the Bureau of Libraries and Learning Resources in the U. S. Office of Education. The termination of federal funds in FY73 means for us in Massachusetts the end of federal funding for the following services now available to us: 1. teletype and TWZ installations and services in 13 libraries. 2. all direct grants for school library and media program development 3. special purpose grants to inaugurate library service to previously unserved groups in cities and towns 4. development of libraries in correctional institutions and other state and county institutions 5. all public library construction grants 6. improved library services to the physically handicapped and disadvantaged.

Memorial Hall Library is seeking help from its friends who will want to help us alter the President's zero funding for libraries. Friends of the library should write their Representatives and Senators and let them know it is important for all of us that the Congress enact an FY74 appropriations bill by June 30, which is the end of fiscal 1973 when all the above mentioned services come to an end. The American Library Association's campaign includes a symbolic dimming of the lights in the library on May 8 at 12 noon for a few minutes to emphasize the theme of the campaign "Dimming of the Lights on the Public's Right to Know". Memorial Hall Library will dim its lights in support of this theme.

Arts, Crafts Festival

The third annual Arts and Craft Festival will begin the 14th of May and last until May 30th. Demonstrations of various crafts will take place Monday through Thursday except for three musical evenings and one literary evening. Your program listing all the names of individuals demonstrating crafts and the additional evening programs will be available the first week in May at the library.

Children's Room

'Kites - On Saturday, April 28 at 1 p.m., we are having a giant kite-building party. We will have the paper, strings and sticks; all you need to bring is yourself and your imagination. We would like to have you sign up by 9 p.m. April 26 so we will have enough material. Everyone who is completing kindergarten or is older is welcome!

Zoo - Memorial Hall Library (Town of Andover) is now a member of the Boston Zoological Society. One of the advantages that we can pass on to you is a membership card that you may use to visit Franklin Park Zoo in Boston free of charge. It will circulate to parents only for one week at a time. If there is a great demand for it we get another membership. Ask for the card at the circulation desk in the Children's Room.

Boy Scouts - Need ideas to win that Pinewood Derby? We have just received two pamphlets called "How to build a winning car". They will be available for one week at a time until the end of May.

Volunteers - We need volunteers for summer programs. Qualifications that you like children and that you be willing to read to them for about 45 minutes in the morning one time, five times, or for all eight weeks of the summer. Don't worry about not knowing what to read or how to read it. We will have a training workshop in late May or early June. Sound like fun? If you are in high school, or older, and are interested, or have questions, please contact Mrs. Johnson at the Children's Room

32 Hospital Regional Center

Bon Secours Hospital will soon become the Regional Control Center which will tie emergency vehicles and hospitals in various sections of the Merrimack Valley and southern New Hampshire into a hospital emergency administrative radio (HEAR) system. Equipment currently is in order and should be delivered shortly to both Bon Secours and Lawrence General Hospitals, as well as to some area fire departments. Others will await community budgetary action before the purchases are made.

The HEAR system will be invaluable should a disaster occur in any of the area communities and the proportions are of such magnitude that the hospital nearest the scene cannot cope with the situation. Assistance in the form of vehicles, personnel and supplies can then be requested through radio communications relayed through the regional center.

On a normal day-to-day basis, the HEAR system will allow emergency departments to communicate directly with emergency vehicles at accident scenes or enroute to hospital, thus affording patients almost immediate attention and permitting the start of treatment before they arrive at the hospital.

This will prove particularly beneficial in the case of those individuals who are products of the new Emergency Medical Technicians Course in life-saving techniques developed at Bon Secours Hospital for emergency personnel at the scene of an accident or in the case of a sudden illness.

Developed by Mrs. Rita Roberts, R.N., Acute Care Coordinator, Mrs. Joyce Constantineau, R.N., Head Nurse in the Emergency Department, and one of her assistants, Mrs. Pauline Blaine, R.N., it offers instruction dealing with cardiopulmonary resuscitation, emergency childbirth, burns, fractures, exposure to heat and cold, the proper method of removing patients in automobile accidents, and a variety of other emergency-related topics.

Currently in the 81 hour course there are twenty men from the Haverhill area who, when they graduate this month, will bring the total number of graduates to over one hundred.

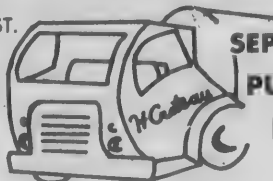

The following men listed have graduated from the Emergency Medical Technicians Course:

Fine Arts Camerata At Chapel

On Mondaynight, April 30th, The Camerata of the Museum of Fine Arts will perform in Cochran Chapel at 8 p.m.

The Camerata, under the direction of Joel Cohen, is an ensemble of four to five singers and seven to nine instrumentalists devoted to the performance of Medieval, Renaissance and early Baroque music. Its concerts feature a great variety of historical instruments from the collection of the Museum of Fine Arts, including original instruments and faithful reconstructions.

Louis Snyder, of the Christian Science Monitor, reviewed them as "... a confident, efficient combination of singers and instrumentalists who no longer approach their ancient musical instruments inhibited by a 'please do not touch' attitude. Everybody plays out and sings out ... A stageful of splendid performers. They played a variety of instruments with style and assurance".

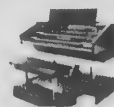

This concert is made possible by a grant from the Massachusetts Council on the Arts and Humanities. There is no charge for admission and the public is cordially invited to attend.

Appointed

Mary Hamilton, R.N. of the health department has been appointed to represent Andover on the Lawrence Area Council of the Office of Children.

- Include prescription drugs under medicare.

In announcing his support, Cronin said: "There are those who say that we should insure a decent standard of living to our senior citizens because of their past contributions to America.

Sports Bug

The VW that's something else.

On rare occasions we blow our minds and put out a limited production run of a real fun car.

This is one of those rare occasions. The Sports Bug. Special paint job. Custom striping. Rallye bucket seats that hold you when you're cornering. Oversize sports-type radial tires and rims that give you high performance traction. Steering that's nimble. Lock to lock, 2.7 turns.

But the Sports Bug is more than fun-loving. Like all Volkswagens, it's dependable, and considerate of your budget. Because even when we blow our minds, we don't lose touch with reality.

Only one problem. When we said the Sports Bug is a limited production car, we weren't putting you on.

We made a small number, and then, so to speak, we broke the mold. So if you want one, let's hear it. Like, now?

Planning Program For Merrimack

A joint effort by Federal, State and regional planners for a $1 million, 18-month waste water management planning program in the Merrimack River Basin was announced today by the U. S. Army Engineers. The Congressionally authorized and funded management plan seeks to restore and maintain the Merrimack - one of the nation's most heavily polluted rivers. It will be directed by the New England Division of the Corps of Engineers with the assistance of the Commonwealth and five regional planning agencies, Colonel John H. Mason announced.

"The planning effort will be conducted in consultation with the Environmental Protection Agency. It will address itself to the high water quality goals of the Federal Water Quality Act Amendments of 1972 to restore and maintain the chemical, physical, and biological integrity of the river," the Colonel said. "We will work to improve water quality, to protect and enhance fish, shellfish and wildlife and recreation in and on the water, by mid-1983, and to end discharge of pollutants into navigable waters by 1985."

The study follows an earlier basin-wide feasibility study by the Army Engineers which incorporated many goals which have since been made a part of the Federal Water Quality Control Act Amendments. Owing to the two-State characteristic of the Basin, the study team will utilize findings and recommendations of the New Hampshire Water Supply and Pollution Control Commission. That Commission has been designated as New Hampshire's lead agency, a requirement of the federal amendments act. Earlier and current state efforts involving existing waste disposal systems will be reviewed. Those programs having EPA approval will be incorporated in the study.

"The 850,000 Massachusetts residents of the Merrimack Basin are going to be hearing much about 'open planning'. We have committed ourselves to this process which will continually incorporate citizens participation in the planning and decision making," the Colonel said.

"Early in plan formulation the attitudes of all area residents will be surveyed and summarized for incorporation in the technical design of project recommendations. Current public attitudes and community goals will be an integral part of the planning process helping to mold the technical solutions for the wastewater management systems. As alternative solutions to pollution problems emerge it will be the duty of the public to critique them and contribute to the plan selection.

"Our primary goal is to design regional wastewater systems that address the broader needs and aspirations of the local people they serve. To carry out this approach, the Corps of Engineers will sponsor five regional planning agencies. The agencies, which will act as the public's communication link with the study team, are: Central Massachusetts Regional Planning Commission, Worcester; Merrimack Valley Planning Commission, Lawrence; Metropolitan Area Planning Council, Boston; Montachusett Regional Planning Commission, Fitchburg; and Northern Middlesex Area Commission, Lowell. Each planning agency will serve as a teacher-learner. Technical information will be channeled to the public with feedback in the form of objectives deemed most viable by the public," Colonel Mason said.

"This is a public invitation to residents of the Merrimack Basin to participate. The public has a responsibility to address the problems of the basin - both the immediate needs and those of the next half century."

Store To Aid Fund

On Sunday afternoon, April 29 from 1 to 5 p.m., the Merrimack Valley Chapter of the March of Dimes will sponsor a Country Store at the Greater Lawrence Regional Vocational Technical High School, on River Road in West Andover.

Prizes ranging from jewelry to furniture and small appliances will be drawn, the Gourmet Club of the Culinary Arts Department of the school will operate a snack bar throughout the afternoon, and an information booth for March of Dimes literature and Walk-A-Thon information will be open.

Co-chairmen of the event are Louise Shaheen of Methuen and Phyllis C. Tyler of Lawrence, assisted by Robert J. Desmond, Avra Skrekas and George Skrekas of Lowell, Charles L. LoPiano of Lawrence, Gertrude Brown of Haverhill and Jack Cotton of Medford.

Test Drive a Porsche or an Audi at Park-Hegarty

Spring is in the air - time to get out of the winter doldrums and into something comfortable... like a new Porsche (with bucket seats that fit to the body) or a new Audi (with the same amount of headroom and legroom as a Rolls Royce). See and drive these unusual cars at Park Hegarty Porsche Audi, Inc., 222 Lowell Street in Lawrence.

The Audi is a lot of cars for the money. The type of system that moves the Cadillac Eldorado also moves the Audi; they both have front wheel drive. The type of system that steers a Ferrari racer also steers the Audi; they both have rack and pinion steering.

The Audi has the same amount of trunk space as Lincoln Continental, yet the Audi is 1/4 the size. The inside of the Audi looks like the inside of a Mercedes Benz; and the Audi has something very important in common with that old standby Volkswagen - service.

The Audi is a lot of cars for different people. It is a sedan that driving enthusiasts can find pleasure in driving. It is a car for daily runs to school, etc. without big gasoline bills. It is a car for travelling, for commuting, for work and for pleasure.

When you want to get away from it all, to fly the coop, the 914 get-away Porsche is the coop to fly with. It hugs and corners rugged winding roads as only a mid-engine car can. It has 5-speed gear-box and rack and pinion steering, so it really reacts. It has a built-in feeling of freedom about it!

Maybe there is a Porsche in your future! Or an Audi! See the complete lines and enjoy a test drive anytime at Park-Hegarty Porsche Audi, Inc., 222 Lowell Street in Lawrence. For further information, call Harry Dooley, Sales Manager, or any of the salesmen at 686-9743. Open Monday through Friday 8:30 - 9, Saturdays 8:30 - 4.

SPRING poured forth some of its beauty, aided by the unusually warm weather of the past weekend. Among the bright offerings of the season is this cherry tree in full bloom.

Shawsheen Race Day Scheduled

The Andover Village Improvement Society will sponsor the third annual race day on the Shawsheen River, May 12. Canoe and kayak races will be held between the Abbot Bridge on Central street and the Ballardvale Dam.

Race day has been designed as a family day, with such opportunities as picnicking, tossing frisbees or playing ball in the nearby AVIS reservation land.

Single and double canoes and kayaks are invited to participate. In the category of everything being eligible as long as it can float, it is hoped that some competition may be found for Al French's war canoe. Registration should be made approximately one hour before the race at Abbot Bridge. Classification will be determined at time of registration.

The novice race will begin at 10 a.m. followed by the intermediates at 11 a.m. The larger, advanced race will begin at 12:30 p.m. and the winners will be awarded the Selectmen's Prize.

Prizes will be awarded in each category.

Those who wish to take part in the races are asked to contact Peter McKee, Al Koch or Phil Dargy. In the event of inclement weather, race day will be postponed to the following Saturday, May 19.

Scouts Plan Town Clean Up

On Saturday, April 28, units of the Boy Scouts of America and Girl Scouts of America, will, once again, support and participate in KAB, Keep America Beautiful Day. Scout groups may be seen throughout the town cleaning areas with undesirable appearance, picking up trash, and generally working towards beautification of our town.

KAB day is a part of a national on-going Scouting program called SOAR, Save Our American Resources. Residents and townspeople are urged to participate in this cleanup project in their own neighborhoods and on their own properties.

Often the man who is willing to do good fails to make good.

VFW Plans Installation

The next monthly meeting of the Andover Veterans of Foreign Wars will be held on May 13, at the Bay State National Bank building on Main street.

The main business of the session will be the installation of officers under the direction of Thomas Webster, installing officer.

Members have been reminded to remember May 1 as Loyalty Day by flying flags, and remembering those who served in the armed forces and the P.O.W.'s who have returned.

Buddy Poppies will be on sale May 18 and 19 in the Andover area, anyone who would like to assist may contact Patrick Flynn.

The membership drive for V.F.W. members is now underway. Further information may be obtained by contacting Patrick Flynn.
